

Abstract

Aiming device for firearms that comprises a retro reflective lenticular element, which collects and reflects ambient light beams and/or beams originated from a light source, and which is seen by the shooter as having a first bright color when the aim line has a desired orientation and having a second color, or no color, when the aim line does not have the desired orientation.